

kqueue()

The `kqueue()` function creates a new kernel event queue and returns a descriptor that can be used to monitor events in a scalable and efficient manner on BSD-based systems.

It's useful in case of using `epoll()`, in order to include support for MacOS and BSD systems.